Obituary General Information

The best way for private parties (families not working with a funeral home) to submit an obituary is online at www.adn.com/obituaries/. Obituaries may be also emailed or brought into the office. Anchorage Daily News does not accept handwritten obituaries; obituaries must be typed to ensure grammar/spelling are legible.

If a funeral home is involved, the obituary must be submitted via the funeral home.

Obituaries may be edited by Anchorage Daily News for spelling, punctuation, grammar, formatting and clarity.

Rates:

Anchorage Daily News offers the following flat-rate obituary package:

- Eighty lines for a flat rate of $210.00 for one day in print and 30 days online, with $12 per each additional line and $20 to include a black and white photo as well as $5 to include an icon.

Details: Eighty lines equal approximately 300 words or 1835 characters. One line equals approximately 4-5 words.

The option to publish obituaries for additional dates within the same week as the initial publication date is available on the online submission form. The pricing for multiple publications is determined as full price for the first date and half-price for each additional date.

Notice General Information

Anchorage Daily News publishes notices for free. A service notice may consist of: deceased's name, date and location of death and date, time and location of any visitations and/or services. Funeral home name is required to place a notice.

Submissions with additional information are considered obituaries and are subject to charges.

Notices may be edited by Anchorage Daily News for spelling, punctuation, grammar and formatting.

Notices may be submitted online at www.adn.com/obituaries/, or via email to obituary@adn.com, be sure to include the text and requested publication date.
